FIRST SONG PRACTICE HELD THREE HUNDRED MEN ON DECK

Large Turnout of Rooters Rehearsed Songs and Yells Enthusiastically

ANOTHER ONE THIS AFTERNOON IN THE HALL

The Rooter's Club is at last in full swing. Yesterday afternoon in the Stratheona Hall more than three hundred men turned out to the practice and sang the songs and yelled the yells with more spirit and energy than has been shown at any practice heretofore. This revival of last year's enthusiasm is most encouraging to those who are striving to make the Rooter's Club fill the important position and attain the results which such organizations fulfill in the other great institutions of learning both in Canada and in the United States.

With the McGill-Queens game only three days off it will be necessary for all men who anticipate joining to get on deck for practice. Practices will be held to-day and to-morrow in the Hall at the same hour. Those in charge have provided new songs and some good tunes. The McGill Band will lead the singing on Saturday, and with such encouragement and help as the band ought to afford, the only thing that can possibly hinder the Club being of immense value to our team, is the possible shortage of men.

Arrangements have been completed whereby all those who attend two practices this week and who bring colours will be admitted to the central grand-stand seats on the East Side of the Campus at a specially reduced rate of twenty-five cents each. This rate applies only to bona-fide members of the Club. The grand-stand has been specially erected in the centre of the bleachers and is larger than that on either side of it. Those who have their seats here, will be able to witness the game from one of the most excellent vantage points of the whole field. This consideration, if any other inducement were necessary other than that all rooters are out helping McGill to win, should prove sufficient reason to fill this new stand to overflowing.

FRENCH CLUB PLANS PROGRAMME OF WORK

Informal Suppers will be a New Feature

Owing to the fact that Mr. J. A. Mathewson, the president of this society, is spending the winter in France, it will be necessary to elect a new president for the coming term. A meeting has been called for this purpose on Monday, October 14th, at 5 o'clock in the Stratheona Hall.

The French Club is one of the smaller clubs which belong to the Faculty of Arts, and which devotes itself to the study of the French language and French literature.

In the past this organization has always received the very strong support of those members of the faculty who are interested in Modern languages. Prominent among these was Dr. Gregor. The absence of this genial professor will be felt here almost as much as in any of the other branches of student activity in which he was engaged. Prof. Du Roure, however, who comes to McGill from Laval University to become one of the staff in the Modern Language department, has shown an enthusiastic interest in the Club, and without doubt this year will be a most successful one.

A novel and interesting programme has been prepared and should prove attractive to many.

Fortnightly suppers are being arranged, it being felt by the French Club executive that nowhere can practice in French conversation be better obtained than when the members have overcome their natural shyness and reserve over the friendly influence of the dinner table.

Afterwards a programme is being offered which should prove both interesting and instructive. Members of the club will read papers and prominent alumni and visitors will address the club.

The Cercle Francais, has a membership of twenty-five. Anyone desiring to become an able and eloquent

It Applies To You

Every man should carry Life Insurance, and should carry it early in life. Then the load is light, and no salary is so small that a portion of it can not, and ought not to be laid aside for so worthy a purpose by the man who has no one dependent upon him, just as much as the man who does. For if he is not a man of family, he is no man at all if he does not ultimately plan to be. Should his plans thus miscarry, there are even then few really better, safer, long-time investments than a good Life Insurance Policy. The holding of such an investment makes a man a better citizen in every way; gives him something more than a hireling's interest in the world of affairs; makes of him something more than a social parasite to be blown off by the first adverse gale and to be trodden under the leaded heel of fate.—Toledo (Ohio) Times.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Editor,
The McGill Daily.

Sir:—I have been an interested reader of your paper this year since its first issue came out last week and I notice that you have devoted space in your columns to almost every institution and activity in connection with university life either in the fields of sport, academic affairs or undergraduate amusements.

The news of the college would seem to have been thoroughly covered. In fact, along these lines of sport all too thoroughly covered, but yet a long one line and a very important one you have been very neglectful. I refer to the Royal Victoria College, many of whose graduates must be readers of your paper, among them myself.

Sir, if it be not presumptuous of me, I would suggest that in future you should not discriminate so unjustly against an institution, the importance of which is so universally recognized and one where the constant activity going on should provide every day at least a column of interesting reading.

The Editor's wastebasket must be a handsome article this year and that

THE ROOTERS CLUB

We are glad to see that the Rooters Club has at last taken a spurt. The attendance at the practice yesterday afternoon was very encouraging and should lead to good results in the coming game on Saturday afternoon.

This club is of comparatively recent origin, last season being the first year of its existence, but during that time it has easily proved not only its right to existence, but also how great has been the void without it. The club should this year have an enrolment of five hundred or six hundred men. This number compares very favorably with the Varsity figures. In Toronto, where the Rooters Club is an older and more firmly established institution than the local organization, the figures are not more than double our own while the total registration shows Varsity to have more than twice the number of students.

There is little doubt but that the Rooters Club has come to stay; already it has become one of the essential features of all our major athletics. Much has been said at one time or another, in a general way of the support and loyalty which we owe to our teams. It is not possible for everyone to play football, of these who do, only a mere handful can be chosen to represent the University, but it is the part of every one to give the team all the support possible. In no more practical manner can an undergraduate show his eagerness to assist them than by shouting with the rooters.

Such encouragement often means much more to the men on the field than the spectators have any conception of.

The McGill Club deserves the full and unqualified support of every McGill man. It has now obtained a good start. We hope that the good work will be more than kept up and that on Saturday afternoon the Rooters Club will be conspicuous, not only by their colours, but also by the large amount of noise which they make.

OUR ADVERTISERS

It is in the power of every student in attendance at McGill University to be of great assistance to this paper and so we write this editorial as a timely hint in this connection. The Daily carries a large volume of high-class advertising matter and it is chiefly owing to the returns brought in by this that the Students Council are enabled to undertake the financial responsibility of publishing the paper. The attainment of this result has necessitated very careful preparation and persistent canvassing during the past summer. The field has been very thoroughly covered; the results obtained have been entirely satisfactory, and now it is possible for the undergraduate to do his part. When you need some necessary article of one kind or another refer to the columns of the Daily to find where you can obtain it and in making your purchase mention the fact to the tradespeople that you saw their advertisement in the columns of the paper. This is a small thing to do for your college publication but at the same time it is an action of a very useful nature. In this way you can show our advertiser that the space they occupy in the paper brings them in returns.

You may feel sure that anything you see mentioned in the Daily's advertisements is of the very highest quality and you can make no mistake if you use the paper as your guide in this matter. Patronize our advertisers and you will be doing something which will prove of benefit to them, to yourself, and to the McGill Daily.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

In response to our appeal for men to take positions upon the staff of this paper, we have received some applications. There are still a number of vacancies left however and we hope to receive a still larger number in the near future.

you have relegated to it all the copy which you must have surely received during the last week from the R.V.C. reflects discreditably on your judgment and your paper as a whole. Could you not do away with some of the indiscriminate sporting news in your columns? Can you expect the students of the Royal Victoria College to subscribe to your paper when their interests receive none of the attention which is their due? Can you afford to antagonize many of your subscribers? These are questions which, Mr. Editor, you must answer, and answer immediately if the Daily is to become the successful publication we hope to see it.

Sir, this letter is prompted by a keen interest in both the paper and the Royal Victoria College and I hope that you will consider what I have said.

Thanking you in advance for the space for this note

I remain

Yours sincerely,
R.V.C. Grad.

MOORE'S
NON-LEAKABLE
FOUNTAIN PEN

There are two things that you have a right to demand of a fountain pen—perfect work while in use and good behavior while not in use.

Moore's covers both of these to perfection. Not only does it write the finest but it keeps on writing freely and evenly as long as there is a drop of ink in the reservoir.

When you are done with the pen a simple operation pulls the pen-point back into the barrel, the cap is screwed on and the ink reservoir becomes an air-tight chamber from which it is impossible for ink to escape.
Moore's is the original non-leakable fountain pen. Naturally the success of this pen has brought forth many imitations, and it is this which prompts us to advise you to look carefully for the Moore imprint.

POOR PASSING AND CATCHING MARKED YESTERDAYS WORKOUT

Squad put in Two Hours of Strenuous Work on the Campus

WING LINE WAS WEAK ON THE OFFENSIVE

This afternoon saw the full squad out at practice. All the cripples were out and Coach Shaughnessy made the men go the pace for a steady two hours. Billington who has a bad leg was out on the track and should be in good trim for Saturday. He slipped in practice yesterday and gave his leg a slight sprain and the Coach is taking no chances as he is depending greatly on Billington for Saturday. Billy has been working hard on the signals and is in as good condition as a few other members of the team. Jimmy Lee was out in uniform but Shaughnessy is taking care of Jimmy for Saturday. Without Jimmy and Billington we would be in a sorry fix. For the first hour of the practice the Coach and the back division kicking and catching and the line scrimmaging the ball and forming up quickly. The wing line showed deplorable lack of condition. Shaughnessy's idea is to get the men to form up and get away quickly. To-day they were working better along this line, but they still lack the staying power to last out a full game at this pace. After a full hour of real hard work the first and second teams lined up against each other and both teams dug in strenuously for over an hour. The features of the play were two 50-yard runs by George Laing, through practically the whole second team. George is playing a wonderful game this year and is in the pink of condition. Kendall, of the second team, showed great ability in running the ball back on kicks. If he were a little surer in his catching he would make some of the first team men travel for their jobs. Apart from these two men the rest of the squad did not show anything brilliant. This is rather disheartening to Shaughnessy as one day he will have the men working pretty smoothly and the next day sees a return of fumbling and weak passing.

The senior line were working well when on the aggressive, but made a poor showing even against the intermediates on the offensive. Saturday night show quite a shake-up on the team. Montgomery who has been playing centre scrumage, was tried at outside wing. He is a hard worker and is a good, sure tackle. The chances are good that he might be kept there. Norm Williamson was used at centre scrumage and fitted in well. He gets the ball out well and has the weight, besides being a fast runner and a fair tackle. Buster Matheson did some good bucking but he is still far from being in condition. Woolfart of the intermediates was tried out on the senior back division and showed surprisingly good form. Although a little light he is a good catch and runs very well. As far as a practice for condition goes, it should have been very beneficial as the men were at it steady for over two hours without a let up.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

George Lang was the hero of the afternoon. His two runs were very spectacular. Both times he gathered up a loose ball and ran through the whole second team for 50 yards. A little of this on Saturday George, and we will be grateful.

Dan Gilmore is showing great spirit. He was out coaching the intermediates and his experience should be of material aid to the team. Of course this is not altogether unselfish of Dan, as he needed the exercise in order to get off a little of that extra beef.

Two spectacular men were seen working out on the track this afternoon. One of them, Mr. Hull, our African big game hunter, is trying for the 120 yard hurdles. He is perfectly built for this event and will fill in nicely the vacancy left by Ken. Dowie. The other man, of the Alf. Shrubbs stride, is commonly known as the 'white hope.' He is good for anything from the 3 mile down, and should make a good weight man if anything should happen to big Mac.

Hazlett will be the man to watch in Saturday's game. He is a good kick combined with a sure pair of hands and a cool head.

Ed. Elliott, it is rumoured may be playing for Queens on Saturday. He has been out of the game, due to parental objections, but after Saturday's win, it will be pretty hard for him to keep out of action.

The stands are rapidly being completed and Saturday should see a bumper crowd.

All up for the Rooter's Club. How can we expect our team to win if we give it no support. Good cheering helps a team considerably, and we need help.

Elliot Green and Ted Savage will handle Saturday's game. It would be hard to get two men who know the game and the rules better.

There will be a big Smoker in the Union on Saturday night. Last year at the Smoker Queens were treated to a well rendered interpretation of "The Hamburg Zoo," and they are probably wondering what the Union will give them this year.

During the above mentioned Smoker, the Boxing, Wrestling, and Fencing Club will stage some bouts. Queen's men have proved themselves top-notchers along these lines in the last couple of years and the visitors will be able to appreciate our efforts.

Printed programmes will be provided for the spectators on Saturday afternoon. This idea is now being adopted by all the Universities in the Intercollegiate Union.

ENGLISH RUGBY TEAM TO PLAY DALHOUSIE

Home and Home Matches Have Been Arranged With Eastern University

At a meeting of the Executive of the English Rugby Club yesterday, it was decided to accept Dalhousie's terms for a match in Halifax on Oct. 19th. It was at first intended that the McGill team should play three matches against Eastern Universities but it appears that for this year they must content themselves with a shot at Dalhousie University. The chief difficulty in the way of a longer tour was the condition of the team. Although the team is in pretty fair condition now, and they have a week in which to busy themselves, it was thought that three matches in succession might prove too much for them.

A return match between McGill and Dalhousie has been arranged for November 2nd. This will be the first time that any of the Eastern Universities have taken part in athletics on the Campus, and we will hope that this will be but the beginning of a long succession of matches between the Universities of the Eastern Provinces with those of the present Intercollegiate Union.

The McGill team is to go into strict training immediately, and during this week they will have a couple of hard practices.

To-morrow the East Campus will be the scene of activities; great attention will be given to scrimmaging, in the forward line, and to passing among the outsiders. This part of the game is certainly the least interesting, but is never the less as important as a regular practice, and the Captain, in a special interview with a Daily reporter, said that he wished players to understand that all those who wished to be tried for the intercollegiate team should turn out to these practices in particular.

On Saturday a team will be selected to play a hard game with the united forces of the Montreal Club and the Harlequins on the Montreal West ground in the afternoon, and there will probably be a try-out game on the main campus on Friday morning.

If the team can get into good condition they will undoubtedly give a good account of themselves, but though the men are keen enough the grounds are few, and here all McGill sports are handicapped.

In the rules of the Athletic Association we find that the purpose of the English Rugby Club is to link up

THE ROAD TO RUIN

Prose Poem

A Hobo stopped me on the street and said, "I want a bite to eat, please lend an honest man a dime and I'll repay you it sometime." I answered, "Tell your story first and afterwards I'll quench your thirst. He looked at me reproachfully then, pointing to a hostelry he said:— 'Twas there I hit the trail and ended finally in fail. 'Twas this way boss, a friend and I one evening thought we'd like to try a dinner in across the way but had no coin wherewith to pay for it until quite suddenly an inspiration dawned on me.

I said to Bill in yon hotel I know the manager quite well. I'll take a room for just to-night, to-morrow it will be all right. I'll get some money, pay the bill, to-night we'll go and eat our fill and charge the damage to the room. I did it, but I sealed our doom, for in the morning with my mail there was no cash, without avail I sought to borrow from a friend who had no coin that he could lend. I thought each day to get a cheque and so you see we lived on spec. Our bill kept growing very fast and when the money came at last it just sufficed to pay the tips we owed the bellboy for the trips he'd made downstairs on our behalf. It's alright stranger, you may laugh but soon they sued us both for rent and into bankruptcy we went, and now I'm out upon the street and seek a dime that I may eat."

And then with heartiest goodwill I handed him a dollar bill. I'd stayed in that hotel one day and when I came to go away I found their cheapest daily rate just figured out as fifty straight.

SUNSHINE SKETCHES REVIEWED FOR READERS OF THE DAILY

Humorous Work by Popular Professor Should Have Wide Circle of Readers

DR. LEACOCK'S LATEST WORK IN BOOK FORM

Professor Stephen Leacock's new book entitled "Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town" shows an exuberance of wit with hardly an interval for more sober reflection, which is characteristic of the author's style in his previous two books "Literary Lapses" and "Nonsense Novels". The book, however, besides being exceedingly funny, also evinces a deep insight into human nature, and draws a very accurate caricature of the people and surroundings of the average little Canadian town. To those who are not familiar with such little towns scattered through the West which the book portrays, the deeper significance of it will not appeal. Those who are familiar with such towns may even drop a tear, which the more casual reader will be splitting his sides with laughter. The book is more than a joke, it is an illustration of the crude social conditions and narrow conceptions of life which characterize 99 per cent. of our smaller Canadian towns. In such little towns everybody knows everybody else's business, the little things of life are magnified out of all due proportion, and the inhabitant's whole world is limited to the boundaries and domestic affairs of his own little town.

His importance in the world is to his own eyes as great as the importance that is attached to him by the little community to which he belongs. The average farmer of such communities only takes an interest in politics insofar as they affect the price of his wheat, his hogs, or his beef; as for any wider interest of an imperial or even a national character they are out of the question.

Similarly the hotel proprietor's political interests are limited to warding off the attacks of zealous local optionists, and even in this he is kept busy.

Prof. Leacock starts his book with a preface, giving an amusing little sketch of his life in which he humbly justified not only his existence but also his position in the world. In tracing his ascent from humble origin to that of head of the department of Economics and Political Science at McGill he goes on to say: "As this position is one of the prizes of my profession, I am able to regard myself as singularly fortunate. The emolument is so high as to place me distinctly above the policemen, postmen, street car conductors, and other salaried officials of the neighborhood, while I am able to mix with the poster of the business men of the city on terms of something like equality."

In the opening chapter of the book he first of all gives a minute and concise description of Mariposa, the typical Western town, whose history the book portrays. Not even in his description of the town free from wit. He describes the width of the street by saying that if you were to roll Jeff Thorpe's barber shop over on its face, it wouldn't reach half way across. After discussing the population which is twice as big in Mariposa as in the Canadian census, the author proceeds to introduce his different characters to us.

The first most important character is Mr. Smith the hotel proprietor with the sign over his hotel of Jos. Smith, Prop. He is typically described in the following words: "You will feel as you draw near that it is no ordinary man that you approach. It is not alone the huge bulk of Mr. Smith (two hundred and eighty pounds as tested on Netley's scales). It is not merely his costume, though the chequered waistcoat of dark blue with a flowered pattern forms, with his shepherd's plaid trousers his grey spots and patent leather boots, a color scheme of no mean order. Nor is it merely Mr. Smith's finely mottled face. The face no doubt is a notable one, solemn, inexpressible, unreadable, the face of the heaven-born hotel keeper. It is more than that. It is the strange dominating personality of the man that somehow holds you captive. I know nothing in history to compare with the position of Mr. Smith among those who drink over his bar, except, though in a lesser degree, the relation of the Emperor Napoleon to the Imperial Guard. When you meet Mr. Smith first you think he looks like an over-dressed pirate. Then you begin to think him a character. You wonder at his enormous bulk. Then the utter hopelessness of knowing what Smith is thinking by merely looking at his features gets on your mind and makes the Mona Lisa seem an open book and the ordinary human countenance is superficial as a puddle in the sunlight. After you have had a drink in Mr. Smith's bar and he has called you by your Christian name, you realize that you are dealing with one of the greatest minds in the hotel business. In such a style does Prof. Leacock introduce his characters to us, though besides his describing the appearance and the impression they convey to us, he makes them more closely acquainted to us by means of dialogue. After meeting Mr. Jos. Smith we come across the pedantic Mr. Golgothe Gingham, the undertaker, who prefers to talk of interments and of caskets rather than of funeral and of coffins. As we read of Mr. Gingham most of us feel we have met him before as the typical country-town undertaker. So also Jeff Thorpe, the barber, Canon Drone, the sedate old country clergyman, studious and learned, but apparently more able to imbibe knowledge than to impart it, the versatile judge Pepperleigh, the amorous bank teller who falls in love with the Judge's daughter, the bank managers Mullins and Duff, and their connection with the Mariposa Whirlwind Campaign, are all characters familiar to the Country Western Town.

Perhaps, the funniest chapter in the whole book is Chapter XI "The Candidacy of Mr. Smith." This chapter again brings prominently before the readers Mr. Jos. Smith, the genial hotel proprietor. He shows an extraordinary ignorance of all political issues which however as the following dialogues will show did not go against him.

"Mr. Smith," said the reporter of the Mariposa Newspaper, "we'd like to get your views of the effect of the proposed reduction of the differential duties?"

"By gosh, Pete," said Mr. Smith, "you can search me. Have a cigar?"

"What do you think, Mr. Smith, would be the result of lowering the ad valorem British preference and admitting American goods at a reciprocal rate?"

"It's a corker, ain't it?" answered Mr. Smith. "What'll you take, lager or domestic?"

And in that short dialogue Mr. Smith showed that he had instantaneously grasped the whole method of dealing with the press.

The interview in the paper next day said that Mr. Smith, while unwilling to state positively that the principle of tariff discrimination was at variance with sound fiscal science, was firmly of opinion that any reciprocal interchange of tariff preferences with the United States must inevitably lead to a serious per capita reduction of the national industry.

the rugby of the East with that of the West, and at last the Club is really making an effort to carry out its purpose. The reason why the Intercollegiate Union, of which McGill is a member, is restricted to four universities, would be difficult to find and there seems to be no reason why it should not be expanded to some of the less remote Eastern Colleges. In any case the English Rugby Club will have the honor of being the pioneers of this enterprise in which we wish them all success.

"Mr. Smith," said the chairman of a delegation of the manufacturers of Mariposa, "what do you propose to do with regard to the tariff if you are elected?"

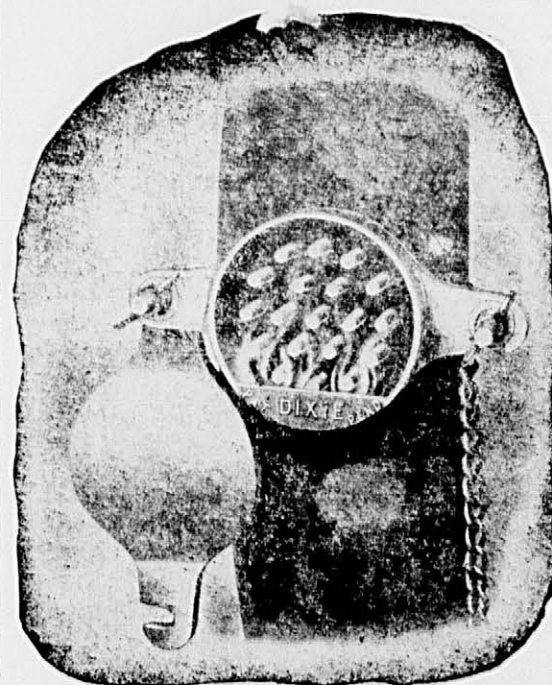

"Boys," answered Mr. Smith, "I'll put her up so darned high they won't never get her down again."

"Mr. Smith," said the chairman of another delegation, "I'm an old free trader."

"Put it there," said Mr. Smith, "so'm I. There ain't nothing like it."

So Mr. Smith by being all to all men and by bribing and corruption wins the election, though he never himself made a single speech from a public platform nor would apparently have been competent of doing so.

"Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town" should prove a popular book of its kind, because apart from its comical aspect, as a caricature it is true to life and accurately portrays scenes and life in many a small Canadian town.
